

CONTENTS

OCTOBER 2009
VOLUME 99 • NUMBER 10

---

LAND MATTERS | 13

---

LETTERS | 15

---

RIPRAP | 22

Sustainable Leeds (not LEED), a smackdown over starchitecture, contemporary art turns heads in Georgetown, high-altitude land art in Switzerland, and HALS issues a child-ish challenge.

Edited by Linda McIntyre

---

GREEN ROOFS | 28

Desert Prototype

Is it worth the extra cost—in dollars and water—to build green roofs in Arizona? One project suggests some answers.

By Melanie Lenart

---

RESIDENTIAL DESIGN | 40

Natural and Modern

A cutting-edge California landscape combines indigenous stone and native plantings.

By Debra Prinzing

---

SUSTAINABLE DESIGN | 46

Modeling Green

A home landscape communicates the how-tos of sustainable stormwater management.

By Adam Regn Arvidson, ASLA

---

STUDENT AWARDS | 56

International Reach

Analysis and Planning outstripped design in this year's entries.

Introduction by Warren Byrd, FASLA

Narratives edited by Joshua Gray

---

CREATIVE SOLUTIONS | 70

Keeping Cool with the Cap On

A landscape architect thinks outside the box in exploring new possibilities for fire hydrants.

By Adrienne Cortez

---

URBAN PARKS | 78

Under the Interstate

The Buffalo Bayou Promenade runs along a flood-prone river beneath a tangle of highway bridges. What sorts of challenges did its designers face? And how has the public embraced this unusual park?

By Daniel Jöst, ASLA

Back on Track

Bold design moves transform a defunct railroad into a 21st-century park.

By Alex Ulam

90

---

BOOKS | 110

---

PRODUCT PROFILES | 112

---

DISPLAY AD INDEX | 116

---

BUYER'S GUIDE INDEX | 117

---

CRITIC AT LARGE | 128

Lament for a Lost Landscape

The High Line is missing its melancholy beauty.

By Jacky Bowring