

CONTENTS

JANUARY 2010
VOLUME 100 • NUMBER 1

LAND MATTERS | 15

LETTERS | 17

RIPRAP | 20

A garden moves onward and upward in Bilbao, a landscape legacy lives on through art, a museum landscape sees the light in Washington, and the SSI calls for pilot projects.

Edited by Linda McIntyre

SUSTAINABLE DESIGN | 26

Drowning in the Desert

A zero-budget plaza at the University of Arizona harvests water from the adjacent building.

By Kim Sorvig

RETROSPECTIVE | 38

Parks Are for People

We remember Theodore Julian Wirth and three generations of leaders in landscape architecture.

By Frank Edgerton Martin

RESIDENTIAL DESIGN | 50

An Ode to the Dunes

An East Hampton landscape defies the glitzy norm to preserve a rare natural landscape.

By Jane Berger

DIALOGUES | 58

Making Research Matter

How can we bridge the gap between researchers and designers? A panel at the ASLA Annual Meeting discussed the issue.

Edited by Daniel Jost, ASLA, and Baldev S. Lamba, ASLA

DESIGN | 70

Let It Snow

The winter months create both challenges and opportunities for landscape architects.

By Adam Regn Arvidson, ASLA

CAMPUS DESIGN | 84

Campus Crossroads

A new plaza at Cornell University is nicely detailed, but does it live up to hopes for a grand gathering space?

By Daniel Jost, ASLA

Wave of the Present

Three unlikely design concepts actually get built in Toronto. Are the wavedecks a hazardous, inaccessible flight of fancy or good public space?

By Adam Regn
Arvidson, ASLA

94

BOOKS | 104

PRODUCT PROFILES | 106

DISPLAY AD INDEX | 108

BUYER'S GUIDE INDEX | 109

PERSPECTIVE | 124

Class Conscience

A planning student questions clean-slate planning. Should landscape architecture students be doing the same?

By Jeffrey Barg