

CONTENTS

AUGUST 2009
VOLUME 99 • NUMBER 8

LAND MATTERS | 17

LETTERS | 18

RIPRAP | 20

Spiral gyrations, art in the landscape (architecture firm), a branch edifice in Central Park, and sculptures still standing in fire-ravaged Australia.

Edited by Linda McIntyre

DESIGN | 26

Catch the Wave

A redesigned entry plaza at the National Aquarium in Baltimore spices up the city's Inner Harbor and brings the aquarium's mission out into the site.

By Daniel Jost, ASLA

URBAN PARKS | 36

Lost Space Park

Can good design make anything out of a leftover bit of land next to a truck route?

By Gweneth Newman Leigh, International ASLA

TECHNOLOGY | 42

Hidden Resources

It's time for a sustainable approach to groundwater resources.

By James L. Sipes, ASLA

RESIDENTIAL DESIGN | 50

Stepping to the Shore

An island off the Washington coast is the setting for a woodland garden.

By Clair Enlow

PRACTICE | 56

The Next Generation Of Your Firm

One owner lays out the steps for ensuring that your practice will continue after you retire.

By James A. van Sweden, FASLA

GREEN ROOFS | 64

High-Maintenance Superstar

The green roof on the California Academy of Sciences is a stunning feat of design. What does it take to keep this new icon ready for its close-up?

By Linda McIntyre

2009 ASLA Professional Awards

Edited by
Stephanie Stubbs

78

BOOKS | 104

PRODUCT PROFILES | 106

DISPLAY AD INDEX | 108

BUYER'S GUIDE INDEX | 109

CRITIC AT LARGE | 120

Thames Washout

Kienast Vogt's landscape design largely fails London's Tate Modern Art Museum.

By Mark Hinshaw