

CONTENTS

DECEMBER 2009
VOLUME 99 • NUMBER 12

LAND MATTERS | 13

LETTERS | 15

RIPRAP | 18

A Berlin landscape, once a divider, now a uniter; treehouses in London's Regents Park; X-rated views from NYC's High Line, and built-in "lawn" furniture on the banks of the Potomac.

Edited by Linda McIntyre

NEIGHBORHOODS | 24 Texas

Unexpected in Dallas

A development becoming well-known for its modern architecture features an unexpected naturalistic landscape.

By David Dillon, Affiliate ASLA

NEIGHBORHOODS | 30 Minnesota

Here, There, and Everywhere

A suburb is taking a neighborhood-scale approach to sustainable stormwater management. So why aren't landscape architects involved anymore?

By James L. Sipes, ASLA

CAMPUS PROFILE | 40

A Diverse Education

A historically black university connects urban ecology and social justice.

By Frank Edgerton Martin

PLANTS | 52

The Low Down

Ground covers put the finishing touch on a landscape.

By Marty Wingate

ON THE COVER

Children play in the water feature at Discovery Green in Houston, page 82.

Photograph courtesy Hargreaves Associates

DESIGN | 58

That New Market Smell

Can the funky, disorganized character of Portland's famed Saturday Market survive the move to a new, carefully designed home?

By Mark Hinshaw

TECHNOLOGY | 64

X Marks the Shot

GPS units for digital cameras can integrate images with locations.

By James L. Sipes, ASLA

RESIDENTIAL DESIGN | 72

Mountain Modest

A high-end Teton County residential landscape takes a naturalistic, National Park-inspired approach. Is this the shape of things to come?

By Adam Regn Arvidson, ASLA

The Biggest Little Park in the World

Strong programming—both fixed attractions and special events—draws crowds to Houston's Discovery Green, an unusual hybrid of park, sculpture garden, and fairground.

By Daniel Jost, ASLA

82

Green Mine

A gravel pit is transformed into parks, trails, and a links-style public golf course.

By Tim Newcomb

94

BOOKS | 104

PRODUCT PROFILES | 106

DISPLAY AD INDEX | 108

BUYER'S GUIDE INDEX | 109

CRITIC AT LARGE | 136

You're Making Me Uncomfortable!

What do we gain by making our parks homeless proof?

By Daniel Jost, ASLA